Compelling Stories

Story #1: Elderly caller was seeking resources for her husband, to help learn how to take care of his personal needs and help her with the chores around the house. They are both in their 70's. She requested a hospital bed for him months ago through their Medicare insurance. Staff followed up with the caller in September. She was pleased that the Interfaith Caregiver's program came to show her how to change her husband and get the house in order. The hospital bed finally arrived as a result of the encouragement from 211 staff to continue to call Medicare on a weekly basis to let them know the urgency for the bed. She stated, "I really appreciate the resources. We finally got him situated."

Story #2: A Parent as Teacher (PAT) staff was on a home visit with one of her families. The dad was present during the visit and in conversation told the staff that he had been having horrible panic attacks while driving. He drives for a living and for the first time a few weeks prior had had a panic attack at work while going over a bridge in the Bay Area. The episodes were getting worse and worse and were becoming debilitating to his health. The staff asked the dad if he was receiving Medi-Cal, which he is. She suggested talking to his provider about getting some mental health services or calling 211 for a list of mental health providers. The dad called 211 immediately after the visit. As a result of the call, he found a provider and began his first session that very week. At the next home visit, the mom was so excited to share the news with the PAT staff. She said her husband was able to drive longer distances a couple of times without having a panic attack and he was looking forward to his second therapy session. Per the wife, "Thank you to the 211 team and to our wonderful home visitors for what you do; it truly changes lives."

Story #3: The caller was new to Stockton with no food in the home and did not know of any food resources. She was referred to the Stockton Emergency Food Bank, the Good Samaritan Training Center, and the Salvation Army in Stockton to get help with food. The caller was also referred to a CalFresh program application site where she can meet with a staff to help her to apply for CalFresh. Upon follow up, the caller was able to obtain groceries through the food pantries and she had started her application for CalFresh.

Story #4: The caller was looking for substance abuse programs, particularly for alcoholics. She had a DUI, no job and no home. Caller was referred to the Substance Abuse Program with San Joaquin County Behavioral Health Services to get treatment and to WorkNet to find job postings. During our follow-up call, the caller is now living with a family member. She also started a new job and is attending an alcohol support group to maintain her sobriety. She stressed to the 211 phone specialist how important it was to reach out for help and how glad she is to know that 211 exists and that she can call us for assistance any time of the day.
